How We Feel is a book about what neuroscience can - and cannot - tell us about our emotions. It is organised into neat chapters with each chapter exploring one emotion, be it anxiety, grief, or happiness. The author draws upon his vast scientific knowledge to teach us about what goes on in the brain when we experience these emotions, but yet simultaneously points out that how we feel - the subjective experience of these emotions - cannot be well captured by neuroscience.

A deeply felt book that explores intimacy through the stories of eight relationships, from a leading neuroscientist and author of How We Feel. What is intimacy and why do we need it? Intimacy is that moment when our true identity is revealed to another, when traumas, fears, and ambitions are shared. Whether in friendship, love or family, intimacy redresses itself constantly, demanding we raze emotional barriers and discover who we really are.

Quotes by Giovanni Frazzetto "But there is an overarching passion that keeps me alive. That is love, understood as a condition in which I can be an inspiration, make someone feel happy and special, and in turn, feel understood and driven. I function better if I am in that condition of love, and I try to cultivate that daily."
